NJ Mandatory Food Safety Training

Important information for the Owner, Executive Chef, General Manager and Bookkeeper.

Food Safety Training is mandatory in New Jersey. If you do not have a key person-in-charge trained in an accredited program by January 2, 2010, you will be in violation of the New Jersey Chapter 24 Food Code. Local health officials will be enforcing this regulation.

In order to facilitate meeting your State obligation free training, exam, and certification are available for new and renewing members of the New Jersey Restaurant Association for a limited time, while supplies last, made possible through a grant from the NJ Department of Labor.

Call the Certification Department at 800.848.6368 to find out more about this important mandate and training for your staff to meet your State obligation.
